Book Bloggers Top 10 of 2009 Voting Booth

13 Dec 2009 | Submitted by: Jackie | 26 Comments |

In loving memory to Dewey, a book blogger who made a HUGE impact on the blogging community, especially all book review blogs, welcome to the Weekly Geeks Book Bloggers Top 10 of 2009.

This is your voting booth. Please be considerate of the person voting next to you. No cheating by looking at someone else's vote! The rules are simple: for each category, you can vote for 2, so make your vote count. There are two exceptions: since there's so many entries, I'm allowing up to 4 votes in the Contemporary and Young Adult Fiction categories. You can vote in all the categories (Childrens & Middle Grade, Contemporary Fiction, Fantasy & Science Fiction, Urban Fantasy, Graphic Novel, Historical Fiction, Memoir, Mystery, Mystery: Thriller, Nonfiction, Romance, Short Story Collections, Women's Fiction, Young Adult and Young Adult: Fantasy) or simply the ones you know.

For a closer look at the titles, each novel has been linked to their Amazon page.

The polls will stay open until midnight on December 29th, so spread the word and let's get the book bloggers to say what our Top 10 of this year is. I'll post the results on New Year's Day.

Edited to add: POLLING IS CLOSED...RESULTS POSTED SOON.

Honor to be nominated for sure. Wanted to mention, When You Are Engulfed by Flames by David Sedaris is a memoir not a mystery. And I'd totally vote for it in the Memoir category. One of my favorite books this year. His personal essays are hilarious.

Great poll!

I take no responsibility in putting Sedaris in the mystery category, I just put them where I was told. At least this year there's only one book that was miscategorized. I would change it, but there's been too many votes casted already.

I don't know all these books, because I'm Brazilian and we don't have all these books translated for us, so the only one that I know is Blood Promise by Richelle Mead, that I read in portuguese translated by fans of the Vampire Academy series's first book, that there is in portuguese in my country, but I really want to read all these books some day. I'm trying to learn English, so sorry if my English is too bad. :)

Pam van Hylckama Vlieg said:

I think its a good poll some of the books are missing though. The Historical Fiction poll that is the wrong Philippa Gregory book. The White Queen came out in 2009, The Other Queen came out in 2008. I voted in a lot of the categories!

18 December 2009 at 3:50 pm

Jackie said:

Pam – it depended on the person nominating the book. Any books was eligible for nominations as long as it was published in 2009, according to the country you live in. So if The Other Queen came out in 2008 in the US, it probably came out in 2009 in the foreign markets, so it would still be eligible. This was to make it fair for those outside of the US. If the Weekly Geeks want to change that for next year, they can.

Wordlily – thanks for that catch. I hadn't seen that. Hopefully I can fix that since there's only 1 vote for one of the copies.
